In the late 1980s, an unprecedented revolution began in Spain's vineyards. Along with the boom in gastronomy and the cultural awakening taking place across the country, Spanish wines took a major leap forward in quality.

Nearly 4 decades later, everything has changed. Long associated with "industry" wines, Spain is redefining itself through wines rooted in a place, a plot, a landscape. We've come to value the vigneron, while the "chemist" has given way to a new generation of well-travelled and highly prepared young winemakers. Multiple projects have flourished, and these today stand alongside the great historical Spanish wineries, becoming undisputable benchmarks for the world's leading sommeliers and fine wine collectors.

This global success, which has gradually positioned Spain's finest wines at a rank they deserved to achieve long ago, has been confined almost exclusively to the great red wines. In our country, and despite the excitement generated by many white wines, the belief still persists that great wines can only be red.

For years at Vila Viniteca, we've sought to challenge that perception by championing and promoting Spain's Great White Wines.

We are delighted to offer you –exclusively worldwide and for the sixth consecutive year– a unique pre-release of 8 Great Whites. These are exceptional, painstakingly crafted wines, each selected for the distinctive character that sets it apart from the other outstanding wines produced at their respective wineries.

We would like to express our thanks to Jorge Monzón, Didier and Jean Belondrade, Ton Mata and Encarna Castillo, Tomàs Cusiné, Miguel Ángel de Gregorio, Eulogio Pomares and Rebeca Montero, Raúl Pérez, Irene Alemany and Laurent Corrio, and to you, too, for continuing to help make Spanish white wine great.

Enjoy and share the finest white wines!

Dominio del Águila

Vino Fino de Paraje Calizo 2023

Dominio del Águila is the exciting project launched by Jorge Monzón in 2010 at La Aguilera, his native village in Burgos province.

The property boasts a unique heritage of very old vines, many of them pre-phylloxera ungrafted vines, which Jorge has gradually been recovering. Grown organically, these vines form remarkable timeless sculptures. Tempranillo, which makes up the majority variety, is grown alongside other traditional red and white varieties in the same vineyards.

The winery includes a historic 17th century grape-treading cellar and six ancient underground galleries, the origins of which are lost in the midst of time. Jorge's sensitivity as a vigneron, together with the expert wine-growing skills and knowledge he acquired at such legendary wineries as Domaine de La Romanée-Conti and Vega Sicilia have made the wines of Dominio del Águila, in a brief period of time, among the most sought-after in Spain.

Vino Fino de Paraje Calizo 2023 comes from a very old vineyard, made up of vines ranging from 120 to 180 years old planted on marl soils with calcareous sandstone and sand with pebbles on the surface. These soils allow most of the vines to be grown ungrafted. No de-leafing is carried out on the canopy, while lateral shoots are not removed, thus ensuring that the grapes are protected from excessive sun exposure. The winemaking is traditional, with a stringent sorting of the fruit. The alcoholic and malo-lactic fermentations are conducted at a very slow pace to allow the grapes to express fully the character of the vintage.

The Albillo Mayor variety is very austere in character and amazingly subtle and refined. It was noticed that in this unique, distinctive plot of vines however, there was something unusual, something very distinctive that Jorge wanted to bring to the fore. Beyond a commitment to something genuinely indigenous, it is a return to slightly wild, even rustic flavours that the Albillo Mayor grape is capable of revealing.

In the words of Jorge Monzón: "In our search for flavour and identity we simply accompany the juices on their journey, allowing them to reveal everything they hold within them. We try to be the grapes' travelling companion."

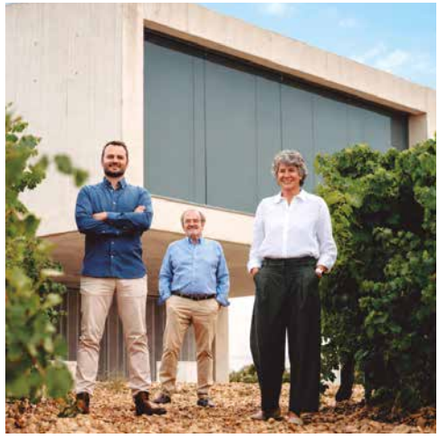
Belondrade

Les Parcelles 2022



It was in 1992 that Didier Belondrade first tasted a young white wine made with the Verdejo grape. The impression it made on him, combined with his passion for Spanish culture, led him to settle in Rueda two years later. His interpretation of Verdejo and his way of ageing it in the style of the finest white Burgundies, brought about a true revolution.

At his Quinta San Diego estate, close to the village of La Seca, Didier succeeded in enhancing the renown of the area's wines, transcending the appellation itself and becoming a leading figure among the producers of Spain's finest wines. For more than 20 years now, alongside technical manager Marta Baquerizo and his son Jean, he has formed an inseparable team.

Les Parcelles is the wine he had dreamed of making when he began at Quinta San Diego. It comes from two Verdejo plots –La Cruz and Alameda– acquired in 2016. Two years later, after tasting each of the individual musts (as is done during each vinification at Belondrade), they observed a special distinctiveness. It was decided to age the wine separately and only release it onto the market when it had begun to be ready to enjoy after a long stay in bottle of almost 5 years.

In the words of Didier Belondrade: "This is a wine that expresses the complexity of an exceptional vintage and the importance of meticulous selection as a mark of winemaking craftsmanship."

Bufadors

Vinya del Rascarà Brut Nature 2021

Bufadors is the most intimate family project of Ton Mata (the 3rd generation of the Recaredo family) alongside his wife Encarna Castillo. The micro-winery they have built is also their home. For them, much more than simply making wine, this is a shared life project.

Both are passionate about terroir-driven sparkling wines capable of expressing a landscape. The wine of La Vinya del Rascarà comes from a single vineyard planted with Xarel·lo in 1999 on soils with extremely high limestone content at Can Rossell de la Serra (located between the municipalities of Sant Sadurní d'Anoia and Torrelavit). The vineyard is farmed both organically and biodynamically.

The vinification is highly precise, and everything that goes into the bottles comes exclusively from the vineyard. The yeasts of the first fermentation are those that are found in the grapes themselves. The source of sugar used to trigger off the second fermentation is the juice obtained from over-ripe grapes of the same vintage from the same vineyard.

There are no kinds of winemaking additives, no sulphites and no type of fining agent. The wine doesn't undergo any cold-stabilisation processes or filtering. All these "requirements" make it a unique, unparalleled wine, untouched by anything beyond what comes from the vineyard itself.

The ageing in bottle with its lees, stopped with a natural cork, lasts for more than 5 years, thus allowing the Xarel·lo to express its full complexity. Disgorgement is carried out by hand without freezing the neck of the bottle.

This vintage is the first to be pressed, vinified, aged, disgorged and labelled at Bufadors Celler.

Ton Mata and Encarna Castillo describe their La Vinya del Rascarà as "a wine without concessions. Direct, transparent and stripped of any artifice. Its identity is built from the landscape, the vineyard and time. When a dream vintage like this comes along, we feel that the whole project truly takes on its full meaning".

Castell del Remei

Gran Reserva Blanc 2021

The history of Castell del Remei dates back to 1780, the earliest year with records of vineyard plantations at the estate. The winery itself was built in the 19th century and was designed from the outset for the production of high quality, long-ageing wines. Castell del Remei today is not only a leading wine estate in the Costers del Segre wine appellation, it is also acknowledged as an example of Spain's most traditional and authentic château-type wine properties.

Tomàs Cusiné, the estate's current owner, is a driven winemaker who joined the wine world at a very young age when his father acquired the estate in 1982.

The Cusiné family modernised the historic cellars and changed the traditional winemaking methods and style of the wines. Along the way, some of the estate's distinguishing features had been lost, and so a few years back, Tomàs Cusiné felt it was necessary to recover some of the property's history "through a sense of duty towards the history of Castell del Remei". It was therefore decided to honour the white wines that were made at the estate in the late 19th century, with the Macabeo grape as the main protagonist and with a very long ageing time.

Castell del Remei Gran Reserva Blanc 2021 was made from Macabeo and Chardonnay. Harvested almost a month apart, the two varieties fermented separately in stainless steel and oak barrels respectively.

The barrel ageing process lasted 20 months in fine-grained French oak, followed by almost three and a half more years in bottle. In all, a five-year stay in the cellars.

The 2021 vintage was one of slow, balanced ripening, combining volume and freshness, aromatic intensity and a magnificent structure for ageing.

In the words of Tomàs Cusiné: "a unique, distinct wine that embodies the pride of having recovered something of importance. It is the fulfilment of a dream which I was very eager to share."

Finca Allende

Marure 2023

Miguel Ángel de Gregorio is one of the most innovative winemakers in Spain. Since founding Finca Allende in 1995, his remarkable journey has included the production of such great Rioja reds as Aurus and Calvario. Over the years he has fine-tuned his winemaking expertise, and his white wines have taken a giant leap forward.

In 2012, he purchased a vineyard in Briones (Rioja) planted in 1947 and made up of Tempranillo and a small proportion of a white variety.

What he initially thought was Viura (the usual white variety among the region's old vines) turned out to be White Grenache –a rarity in Rioja Alta. He decided to vinify these white grapes separately, and the results proved amazing.

The grapes were picked painstakingly by hand, since with such a small quantity each bunch had to be made the most of.

The grapes then underwent a gentle pressing in a "timeless" manual basket press.

The must was fermented in one barrel and a few demi-johns, where the wine remained on its lees for 4 months. The ageing process then continued without the lees for more than two years in new French oak barrels.

Marure is an incredibly rare wine: in the 2023 vintage, only 420 bottles were produced.

"This is a very exceptional wine, which I discovered without looking for it. Like everything unique, it has a touch of magic. Producing Marure was like a game exploring the unknown, which is in the DNA of Allende", explains Miguel Ángel de Gregorio.

Eulogio Pomares

Parcela en Aios 2025

A leading figure in the Galician wine region, Eulogio Pomares is also a well-loved and respected personality recognised for his wide knowledge of the Albariño grape variety and his commitment to terroir-driven wines. At his family-run Zárate winery, he represents the 7th generation of his Salnés Valley vigneron family and has helped save the region's rich viticultural heritage, practising eco-friendly vine-growing and playing a decisive role in developing the international renown of Galician wines.

Tirelessly supported by his wife, Rebeca Montero, he has also set up micro-projects in other wine regions, such as Ribeira Sacra, and collaborated on ventures in the Dão region in Portugal, as well as carrying out his own trials on different vinification techniques.

Since his teenage days, Eulogio has regularly frequented a beautiful beach in Aios in the Sanxenxo municipality. In 2019, a very distinctive plot of vines close to this beach caught his eye. Situated close to cliffs, the vines were planted more than 40 years ago on geologically very ancient and highly-weathered schist soils.

Despite the challenges of practising sustainable viticulture close to the sea, Eulogio maintains a permanent cover crop in the rows. The expression of these soils is reflected in the wine's greater structure on the palate.

In this vintage, the wine was aged for 8 months on its fine lees in 600-litre French oak casks.

As Eulogio Pomares remarks: "many years ago, more muscular, more structured, more complex Albariño wines were made, and these characteristics came from the soils. In producing this wine, we have sought to recover the style of Salnés wines made 50 years ago".

Raúl Pérez

Areas de Montalvo 2021

Raúl Pérez, from Valtuille de Abajo in León province, is one of Spain's most internationally renowned winemakers and has won multiple awards and accolades. In 1993, when only 19 years old, he joined Castro Ventosa, his family's small winery. A decade later, he set up his own project, Bodegas y Viñedos Raúl Pérez.

Among his many qualities, two traits stand out: his visionary character and his generosity in sharing his knowledge with vignerons in other wine regions. He has taken an active part in ventures in his native Bierzo and in different wine regions in Galicia, Asturias, Castilla y León, Rioja, Sierra de Gredos, Alicante and Almansa. Outside Spain, he has also worked alongside such prominent figures as Dirk Niepoort in Portugal and Eben Sadie in South Africa and taken part in harvests in Bordeaux, Chile and Argentina.

His focus has always been centred on the vineyard and indigenous grape varieties, the first one being Mencía, which he unquestionably helped to put on a pedestal, giving the wines a more Burgundian accent by dividing up his family's vineyards according to altitude, exposure and soil-type.

The Areas de Montalvo idea emerged in 1997 when he sought a different wine profile from the one existing in Rías Baixas at that time. He took inspiration from the great wines of Bierzo grown on sandy soils, which are scarce in Rías Baixas.

After making the first vintage (2017), he decided to wait 5 years "to see if the wine really had consistency and personality and if it was actually different", before releasing it onto the market.

The winemaking remains simple in order to allow the wine to take centre stage: fermentation and one year's ageing in barrel, without bâtonnage and without rackings.

Wines that come from sandy soils always have much more glycerine, which provides a foil for the acidity and makes the wine more pleasant on the palate. Aromatically, it is the character of the wine that is sought rather than fruit aromas.

For Raúl Pérez, "Areas de Montalvo is a wine built for ageing and cellaring. At a time when people tend to live for the day, this wine represents the opposite values."

Alemany i Corrio

Sot Lefriec Blanc 2024

Penedès-born Irene Alemany and Laurent Corrio from Brittany met while studying and working in Burgundy. In 1999, they made their first wine, Sot Lefriec red, from tiny plots of vines in Olesa de Bonesvalls belonging to Irene's family. From the very first vintage, it won plaudits from wine critics and soon became a cult wine, making it one of the first garage wines to come out of Catalonia. What was thought to be an experience of little consequence, ended up changing the course of their lives. "Starting the house from the roof down", was how they described it. They went on to settle permanently in Vilafranca del Penedès.

In making that first wine, they enjoyed complete freedom and offered a new version of Penedès red, no doubt getting their inspiration from Burgundy.

Soon afterwards, they were growing white varieties, among which featured their own interpretation of Xarel·lo. They remained true to themselves and very purist in their approach, detached from the latest fads and always driven by the desire for their wines to reflect the terroir from which they came.

Drawing on the experience they had gained over the years, together with their close connection to the land and an introspective approach ("internal work", says Irene), they took another stride forward with the Xarel·lo variety, a grape which they felt conveyed a sense of purity and resilience.

Sot Lefriec Blanc 2024 comes from a plot planted 70 years ago with Xarel·lo on shallow limestone soils containing marine fossils.

The grapes were fermented in two very lightly charred French oak barrels of 500 and 300 litres, respectively, in which they were also aged, without bâtonnage.

The wine reflects the efforts and struggles and contained emotions, along with the desire that this wine will not fail to impress.

For Irene and Laurent: "this wine is from a vintage that was very warm but not as dry as the 2022 and 2023. It is a more immediate and accessible white. Though a wine to cellar, it is also already approachable in its youth."
